

KIDNAPPED BOY CAN'T IDENTIFY MEN ARRESTED

Seven Suspects Face
Young Bozzuffi and Are Set Free.

In the hunt for the quartet who abducted young Tony Bozzuffi, the east side banker's son, Detective-Sergeant Joe Petrosino and his staff of Italian sleuths early today rounded up six more suspects in the criminal covers of the Tombs. Three prisoners were there already—Vincenzo Lupo, of the old "Barrel Murder" gang, and Constantino and Gialmo, who were arrested on the day the boy returned home after spending two days in the hands of his four captors.

In correlating the last six Italian detectives were guided by the somewhat vague statements Tony Bozzuffi had made when he looked over the Sicilian section of the Roques' Gallery at Headquarters. Occasionally he would say:

"That looks something like one of the men."

On the strength of these remarks the detectives found and looked up Frank Trotino, thirty-four years old, of No. 23 Roosevelt street; Caesar M. Mard, twenty-two, of No. 118 Mott street; Antonio Barbuta, twenty-four, of Red Bank, N. J.; Mungo Vinaglio, of No. 118 Mott street; Vincenzo Cassadonti, thirty-four, of No. 17 Hester street, and Vincenzo Gerovise, of No. 165 Mulberry street.

Accompanied by his father, young Tony came to Centre Street Court, where Lupo was arraigned to-day. Although the boy had been positive when he saw Lupo's photograph that he was one of his abductors, he declared in court he could not say Lupo was the man, and Magistrate Steinert turned the Sicilian loose.

There was a general belief that the Bozzuffis had been intimidated into refusing to recognize any of the suspects who might be guilty.

After the search in court young Bozzuffi was taken to the Tombs to have a look at the six prisoners from Mulberry Bend. He said he never had seen any of them before, either and they were discharged.

BALTIC STOWAWAY MAY BE A SUICIDE

Discharged Steward Found on Board Disappeared, Leaving Note Behind.

When the Baltic, of the White Star line, seven days and fourteen hours out from Liverpool, docked to-day, the officers told a story of a captured stowaway who had disappeared in mid-voyage leaving a note which indicated that he meant to commit suicide by jumping overboard. But the captain didn't think the man had jumped overboard. He thought he was still concealed about the big ship somewhere.

The missing one was William Palfier, an English steward, who had been discharged on the last trip across. At Liverpool he slipped aboard and hid in the hold, intending to get a job with a liner sailing from New York to-day.

On Wednesday he was discovered and hauled out. He would have been detained on board and turned over to the authorities on his arrival here.

But Thursday morning he had disappeared. A note in his handwriting was found in his bunk. It read as follows:

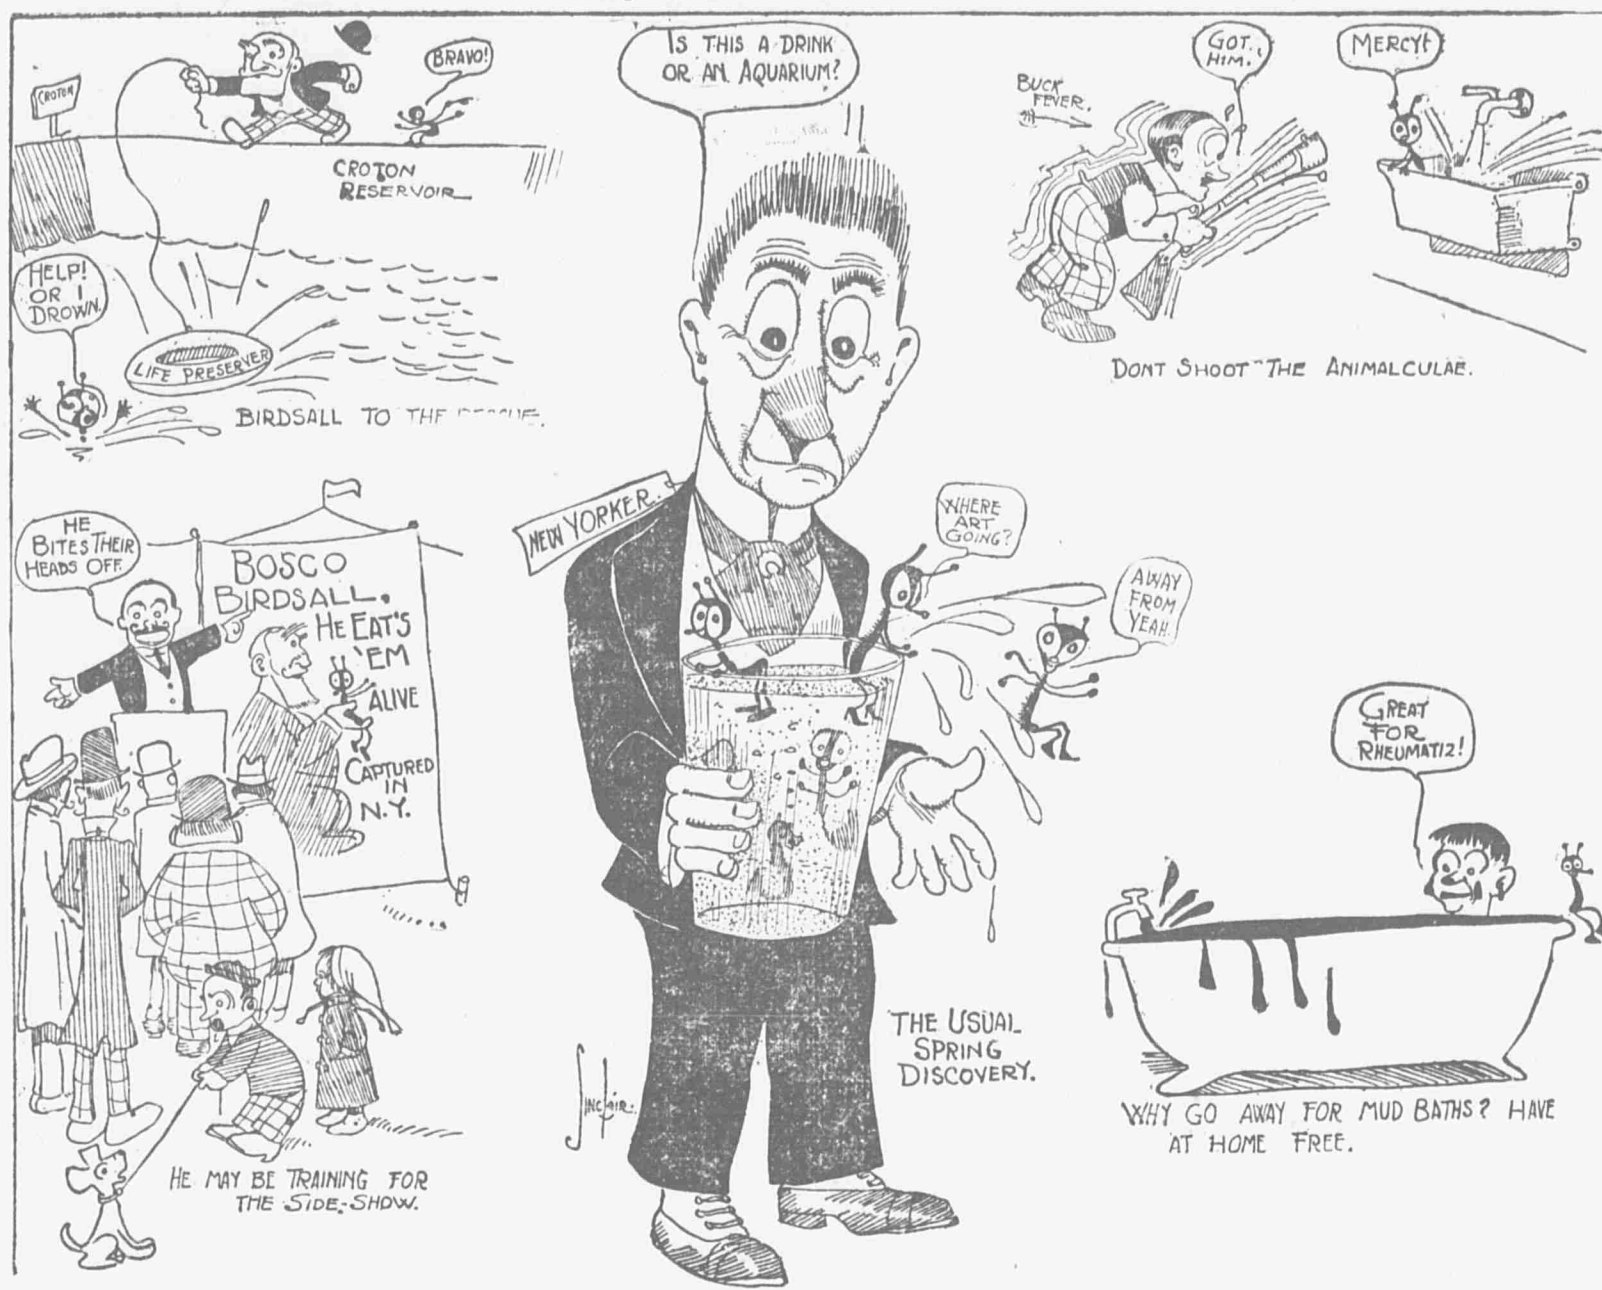

"Good-by, the game is up; I've had my fling and here goes."

Search was made over the steamship, but there was no sign of Palfier. The officers say that the crew were friendly to the stowaway and that some of them probably found a secure hiding place for him and would smuggle him ashore to-day.

Daniel Frohman was one of the passengers. He brought with him permission from Henry Wing, President of the production here of a new drama, "His House in Order." Mr. Frohman was

DON'T BOIL MICROBES; JUST EAT 'EM ALIVE.

By Walter A. Sinclair.

Don't boil the animalculae. On which we live and thrive. For Mr. Birdsall says that we should just eat them alive. —Croton Ballads.

There is a story of a New Yorker who woke up in a strange hotel yesterday morning after a wild night on the hand-painted deserts. Wishing to bathe his throbbing temples, he turned on the cold water faucet, regarded the turbid fluid thoughtfully, and exclaimed:

"Well, how the Bingham did I get to St. Louis?"

But this is quite another story than that told to the average New Yorker by Chief Engineer Birdsall, press agent for Croton brand Adam's ale, extra dark. Mr. Birdsall is the friend of the low and humble, not to say down-trodden, microbe. He doesn't think that animalculae should be used like cabbage and boiled. What if the water is inhabited, reasons Engineer Birdsall; better drink a menagerie than a graveyard.

Don't Spoil the Ticklers.

Boiled water is flat. It lacks the necessary "bead" so much desired by "connoisseurs." No flat water for flat-dwellers. The animalculae gives the proper scratch when they are alive, keep the system nicely brushed up and tickled. Can't expect that in a septiculchre.

Absolutely pure water is medicine, says Mr. Birdsall, and of course, nobody wants to drink medicine constantly—at least, not to quench thirst. There is only one brand of medicine that has ever been popular with thirsty persons, and since Dr. Wiley's exposures before the Pure Fluid Congressmen even this beverage has been subjected to suspicion.

Shoo Boys Away.

So well does Mr. Birdsall think of his little pets that he can be seen any day standing on the banks of the Croton

Reservoir shooing away small boys who cluelessly amuse themselves by throwing sticks and stones at the inoffensive creatures in his aquarium. He also is ready to throw life-preservers to any animalculae who are suddenly taken with cramps and are in danger of drowning.

The Carnegie fund for heroes is respectfully asked to do something nice in the way of recognizing Mr. Birdsall's services in thus saving millions of lives. Wholesale heroism is as deserving as retail.

The following rules are given how to act in case you find a kindergarten in your drink to-day:

1. Keep cool.

2. Get a net and approach him cautiously and in friendly fashion. An animalculae will not pursue you if you show friendly intentions.

3. Don't strike or boil. Don't use cruelty to the microbe. Remember he may be a father, a mother or a whole blank family.

By observing these common precautions our native fauna may be preserved to posterity.

that up to March 1 he had a permit for using water from the hydrant in front of the place, but that he could not get the permit renewed. He was given instead, he said, a permit allowing him to tap the water main, which had been done. Friedman told the court that the contractors were not given the right to use the water.

Magistrate Whitman paroled Moore and instructed the representative of the contractors to try and fix matters up with Commissioner Ellison, of the Water Department.

At the offices of the Water Department to-day Mr. Padden explained that the permit given the contractors had lapsed, and that on this account the water had been shut off.

This afternoon the four boilers used by the contractors for their steam drills in the big excavation were all idle. A fifth boiler on the Seventy-seventh street side was running with water brought in buckets from a little house at some distance. Canavan, senior, the putnam of the firm, was in an ugly temper over the interruption of his work by the Water Department. His drillers were all idle, and in their places were twenty or thirty Italians, drilling by hand.

Two policemen were on guard to-day to see that the water was not surreptitiously tapped at the mains.

BILL OUSTS ALEXANDER.

State Gas Meter Inspector Likely to Lose Office.

(Special to The Evening World.)

ALBANY, March 8.—The bill ousting Jastrow Alexander as State Gas Inspector and transferring the duties of his office to the State Gas Commission, was introduced to-day by Majority Leader Moreland, of the Assembly.

One of the members of the firm was in court and told Magistrate Whitman

SUBWAY TRAIN GRINDS UP MAN

Koch Flung Ahead of Cars, Which Pass Over His Body on Track.

Stepping out of the path of a rushing south-bound train in the open cut of the Subway at One Hundred and Thirty-third street and Broadway to-day Switchman Henry Koch did not note the approach of a north-bound train, which struck and hurled him to death. His body was flung in front of the train and then crushed by the wheels.

The train passed entirely over the body, Motorman D. C. Ormsby being unable to check the train.

Train Despatcher Talsman, who witnessed the accident and had shouted to Koch in an endeavor to warn him of his danger, lifted the body to the platform in the hope that a spark of life remained, but Dr. Corder, of the J. Hood Wright Hospital, said Koch was probably killed when the train struck him and flung him ahead.

Patrolman Goldman, of the West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street station, arrested the motorman. Koch was thirty-two years of age, and lived at No. 237 East One Hundred and Thirtieth street.

Coroner Harburger instructed his physician, Dr. O'Hanlon, to perform an autopsy on Koch's body with the object of discovering if the dead track-walker's lungs show any evidence of subway consumption, due to the presence of particles of steel dust in his lungs. This to test the theory of Dr. George H. Soper, consulting sanitary engineer.

Record of Health recently furnished. Prof. John H. Larkin, pathologist of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, will cooperate with Dr. O'Hanlon in this autopsy.

Ormsby was arraigned before Coroner Harburger and held in $1,500 bail to await the inquest.

NINETEEN-O-SIX SPRING CLOTHES.

Models. Fabrics. Values.

All are here. Twice as many models as we have ever shown. Handsomer fabrics than have ever been woven before. Time is now when here in America our weavers lead the world in handsome designs—and the values are here that have made this house justly famous for exceptional quality at popular prices.

Because we are affiliated with six of the greatest tailoring organizations in the land, besides directing several tailoring organizations under our own control, we can present more models, more handsome designs and better values than any other concern can possibly presume to offer you.

Brill Custom-Tailored Garments at $10.

The only garments ever sold at $10 that will hold the shape, fit and style until worn out. When we introduced them three years ago we raised the standard of tailoring at this price to a height never before attempted. To-day, in the face of a continuously rising market, we maintain that high standard established when the cost of production was 25% less. You benefit by our achievement.

SUITS of all wool chevot, handsome cassimere, neat worsted and fast black Thibet, in newest modelled long coats, with centre or side vents, $10.

SPRING COATS of all wool black and Oxford materials, serge lined (satin sleeve linings), new 42-inch models, $10.

TOP COATS of all wool double-and-twist covert, in newest shades, cut long, with deep vents, $10.

RAINCOATS of Cravenette worsted and black Thibet, ¾ lined with imported Venetian; cut full 52 inches long, extra roomy and tailored to fit snug about the collar, with broad shoulders; deep hook-vent in back, $10.

We've sold over fifty thousand in three years, and have received less than a dozen complaints. And right here we want to say if any reader of this announcement has a grievance over a $10.00 suit or overcoat, or over any priced suit or overcoat, or over anything that we ever had anything to do with, we wish he'd come in or write us and we shall gladly do the right thing.

High Grade Garments at $15.

Involving the hand-tailoring usually found in merchant-tailor efforts costing double.

SUITS of high-grade, hand-finished all-wool cassimere, cut on extreme models, with deep side vents.

SUITS of dignified worsteds, more conservatively modelled.

SUITS of velour-finished black Thibet, in four new conservative, medium and extreme models.

CRAVENETTE RAINCOATS of Oxford velour and unfinished worsted, tailored by one of America's foremost raincoat tailors.

SPRING COATS, fitted back, Chesterfield models, reminiscent of the courtly clothes of the French Louis XIV. Newest trends in effects.

The above are values found exclusively in Brill Stores at $15.

Brill Garments at $20.

That compete directly with the swell tailors' productions.

SUITS of the popular worsteds, of every new weave, in shade ranges from light nutria-gray and aluminum gray to plain black and white silk mixtures, and in new models from the conservative to the most extreme.

SUITS of black vicuna-finished Thibets and unshorn worsteds, in exclusive models, from America's three finest tailoring organizations.

SPRING COATS of black and Oxford vicuna, silk lined to the edge; form-fitting French back coats of correct herringbone effect tweeds, silk lined; and of black and Oxford vicunas.

CRAVENETTE RAINCOATS of worsted, velour and Thibet that, although loose and roomy, still outline the form. These garments conform to the highest possible standard of ready-for-service tailoring, and are extreme value at this price.

Our Entire Range of 1906 Models of Custom Garments Ready-for-Wear representing a most complete showing, is now ready. In addition to our $10, $15 and $20 grades we offer:

Spring Suits, $20 to $35. Fitted-Back Chesterfield Coats, $15 to $30.
